Tips for Leveraging Your Leadership Judgment

You have a natural ability to balance data and business outcomes with the realities of human behavior. Find ways to continue to delegate sensibly and consider the strengths of your team. Try to get ahead of problems and coach others to come up with solutions on their own.

You have good instincts around situations in which you should just listen versus act. Leverage these to continue to build trust with your team and ensure their opinions are heard.

Continue to consider all data points when making a decision and be a role model to others for the best ways to gain maximum buy-in.

ACCOMMODATION

The extent to which individuals place more emphasis on accommodating the needs of others as opposed to prioritizing their personal needs.

Tips for Adapting Your Accommodation Style

You may be inclined to let things go versus voice your concerns. When something bothers you, remember to speak up or you may begin to feel as if others are taking advantage of you.

Think of yourself as a steward of your company, responsible for acting in the company's best interests at all times. When a customer makes a request, consider if it is reasonable based on the business relationship.

Maintain a balance between your concern for people and holding them accountable. Evaluate others based on task accomplishment and contribution to the organization as well as on their likeability and your relationship.

Remember, if you are constantly expressing your opinion to the exclusion of others', you may be tuned out.

Assertiveness can sometimes be perceived as negative. Consider whether your requests sound overly directive. Do your questions sound more like demands than requests? Do you consider other people's priorities and timelines before you petition for their help? Use kinder, more diplomatic language to encourage collaboration and feedback.

To avoid sounding abrasive, remember to confront the issue instead of the person.

CRITICISM TOLERANCE

The extent to which individuals interpret criticism objectively versus being sensitive to feedback from others.

Tips for Adapting Your Criticism Tolerance Style

This may impact the following competency(ies): Analysis & Decision Making, Teamwork

People that are more sensitive to criticism tend to be very concerned about meeting the expectations of others and sometimes take it personally when they receive feedback otherwise. Focus on the message and how you can improve, rather than the emotion you may feel, and you will be able to better use the feedback to your benefit.

If you have an emotional reaction when others give you feedback, this may affect their willingness to provide you with feedback in the future. Take notes on their specific comments so that you can refer back to them later and consider their suggestions carefully. By doing this, you will be able to focus on the specifics of their suggestions, rather than your initial reaction to hearing the feedback. Make sure to take time to process the information you receive before discussing in detail. Also, make a point to thank others for sharing their thoughts with you, so that you keep feedback channels open in the future.

Tips for Adapting Your Interpersonal Insight Style

This may impact the following competency(ies): Teamwork

Sometimes it is important to take things at face value. For example, if you sense that someone is not being honest, ask the person directly rather than dwell on their intentions. This may help you to quickly move past your concerns.

Although you may be instinctively aware of others' feelings and motivations, be sure to balance how much time you spend thinking or worrying about interpersonal issues versus working productively.

Tips for Adapting Your Multitasking Style

This may impact the following competency(ies): Associate Development, Communication

At the beginning of each workday, prioritize your tasks and allocate the time needed to complete them. Tackle each task according to its order of importance, but make an effort to be flexible if priorities change. If you aren't sure which tasks should take priority, work with your supervisor to help organize your day.

Break projects down into defined work steps so that you can focus and achieve a sense of closure at the completion of each step, rather than at the completion of an entire project.

If you find yourself getting overwhelmed or stressed with a multitude of responsibilities, take a few minutes to relax and reset. Take a walk, meditate, or simply stand up and stretch. Allowing yourself a moment to reset will help you refocus and tackle your work.

Avoid the urge to immediately criticize an idea. Instead, stay open-minded and allow others to fully explain their thoughts. Be willing to explore options that you may initially be averse to.

Being overly negative can impact your relationships with your coworkers. If you are feeling worried or pessimistic, consider whether you need to express your opinion and how it might impact others. It might be better to find a more positive way to phrase your concern.

Tips for Adapting Your Process-Focused Style

This may impact the following competency(ies): Results Focus, Teamwork

Be careful that your desire for organization does not cause you to become inflexible and overly frustrated by unexpected changes. Take a moment to understand why the change is occurring, and how you can adjust your process to accommodate this change. Then, accept the change and move forward.

Ask your boss or a trusted mentor to give you examples of a time when your organized approach was a hindrance rather than an asset. Learn to recognize similar situations and modify your approach accordingly.

Spend less time planning your actions, especially at the detail level, and more time implementing them. Record the amount of time you spend each week organizing your workspace or planning your activities. Try to reduce this time a little each week.

REFLECTIVE THINKING

The extent to which individuals thoroughly consider and seek out information, as opposed to being comfortable acting with limited information.

Tips for Adapting Your Reflective Thinking Style

This may impact the following competency(ies): Analysis & Decision Making

Your preference to carefully consider an issue before taking action may not be conducive to the fast pace of business. Set a realistic deadline by which you will have thought through an issue and made a decision. Hold yourself accountable for meeting this deadline.

View decision making as a trade-off between having all the information and being timely. Consciously weigh the analysis cost against the price of not taking timely action. When the consequences of a wrong decision are cheap and the value of taking action is high, do not waste your resources with excessive analysis.

When you find yourself overthinking a situation or stuck in 'analysis paralysis', remind yourself that you cannot control everything. It is not feasible to consider every possible eventuality in an attempt to avoid ever making a mistake. No one can foresee all possible scenarios, so give yourself a break and try to let go.

Find opportunities to let your guard down. Participate in informal social events with coworkers and make a concerted effort to relax and enjoy the interaction. As you become more comfortable, try opening up a little bit about yourself.

Set deadlines and stick to them. For longer term assignments, identify small, intermediary steps and assign a deadline to each one. Track your progress as you complete each step.

If you find yourself lacking energy during the day, try to take a few moments to take a step back from the task at hand and recharge.

Don't jump back and forth between tasks. It's easier to maintain your focus when it isn't divided. Finish the most important tasks first and then be purposeful in your intent to complete the rest.
